Welcome to Fields Spring State Park

Fields Spring State Park is a 792-acre forested camping park in the Blue Mountains of Southeastern Washington. A portion of the park sits at a height of 4,500 feet atop Puffer Butte and offers a spectacular view of three states and the Grand Ronde Canyon.

Fields Spring is a naturalist’s paradise, with 151 species of plants. Wildflowers are in bloom from late spring through summer. The park is forested with Ponderosa pine, western larch, Douglas-fir and grand fir and supports wildlife such as whitetail and mule deer, elk, black bear, mountain sheep and coyote. Many types of birds, including several species of woodpeckers, predatory birds, owls and large flocks of turkeys can be seen in the park.

The park and the surrounding area offer recreational opportunities for hiking, bicycling, backpacking, mountain climbing, hunting and fishing. Winter recreational facilities include tubing runs, cross-country skiing on groomed trails and snowshoeing. Warming huts are available for use in three locations, including one with a beautiful tri-state view. Snowmobiling is allowed on nearby forest service property.

Fields Spring State Park has 20 non-hookup campsites, each with a table and fire pit. Modern restrooms with hot showers also are available. Two teepees are available for nightly rental and are reservable. Picnic sites are available throughout the park.

Two retreat centers may be reserved by groups by calling (800) 360-4240. Wohelo Lodge accommodates up to 25 people, and Puffer Butte Lodge will accommodate up to 80 people. Park staff will present interpretive programs and nature walks to campers and retreat center visitors upon request.

Located 30 miles south of Clarkston on Highway 129, Fields Spring State Park is named after Ben and Mary Fields, early settlers in the Grand Ronde River area. The Fields developed the spring in the park and used the water for their ranch and home. The spring continues to be an attraction to visitors.

The park is situated along one of the routes used by the Nez Perce Indians when traveling from the Joseph area in Oregon to Lapawai in Idaho.
