Leadbetter Point State Park is a natural area open for day use with beaches along Willapa Bay and the Pacific Ocean. The park borders the Willapa National Wildlife Refuge with nearly 5 miles of ocean beach and several miles of bay beach.

Part of the Willapa Bay Water Trail, migratory birds are viewable from fall through spring, including shovelers, brants, pintails, buffleheads and sooty shearwaters. The Martha Jordan Birding Trail provides for ADA access to the Hinse Marsh, a wintering area for Trumpeter Swans. The trail continues another 0.5-miles through boardwalks and forested dunes and more birding opportunities. More than 100 species of birds have been recorded here. Visitors also can enjoy hiking, fishing and clamming at the park.

About one mile south of the main trailhead at Leadbetter Point State Park is a smaller site with parking, a vault toilet and access to the beach. The site has been used as a hand-launch site for kayaks and canoes and is classified as a Resource Area.

Overnight accommodations

Leadbetter Point State Park is a day-use park and does not offer overnight accommodations. Nearby Cape Disappointment offers overnight stays at campsites, cabins and yurts. For details, please see the brochure or website for Cape Disappointment State Park.

Park history

Leadbetter Point was named Low Point in 1788 by British explorer John Meares, who also named Cape Disappointment. The name changed in 1852 to honor Lieutenant Danville Leadbetter, an associate in the U.S. Coast Survey. The Washington State Parks and Recreation Commission acquired the property between 1958 and 2005 through 10 separate purchases and exchange. The park was formally named on Oct. 21, 1974.

Park amenities and facilities

Leadbetter Point State Park offers the following amenities and facilities to make your visit more enjoyable and comfortable, including:
